

I denounce the Ethiopian government and its financial backers—the US, the UK, Germany, Switzerland, Canada, and the World Bank, which provide financing to Ethiopia through international aid packages—for the unjust imprisonment of Omot Agwa Okwoy, Ashinie Astin, and Jamal Oumar Hojele. Helping to give indigenous and marginalized people a voice about their most precious resources—their land and their food—is NOT terrorism; it is the foundation of a democratic and sustainable development policy. I call on the government of Ethiopia to drop of all charges against the detainees and release them immediately.

171	10/22/15	Neil	Pitcairn	Sth Nutfield		United Kingdom	As a visitor to Ethiopia during and after the Mengistu regime, I applaud the efforts of the present government to improve the living conditions of Ethiopia's many peoples. The rate of progress has been amazing, the commitment of many selfless people in the public and private sectors has been truly impressive, but.... and it is a really sorrowful "but".... I am deeply disappointed that the cost in human terms is beginning to be too big for the country to bear, that the early honourable commitments to democracy and free speech are being dishonoured. Treating people as obstacles to progress if they dare peacefully to raise honest concerns is unacceptable. As a friend and supporter of Ethiopia I ask its government and those who support it to look deeply into their conciences and the possible consequences of their actions... or inaction.

907	11/6/15	Ojot Miru	Ojulu	Geneva	Switzerland	I have the privilege of knowing and working with Omot for many years in Gambella. He is one of the well-respected elders in the region across the board and had played an instrumental role in reconciliation and peace-building during the region's violent past. Defending indigenous peoples land rights and food security is in the interest of all stakeholders for a peaceful and prosperous Ethiopia for everybody. Instead of jailing and intimidation, the Ethiopian government should start to radically rethink its development policies in peripheral regions through the eyes, knowledge and experiences of minorities and indigenous peoples themselves.
